ON SOAP,

IN RELATION TO THE COMPLEXION.

FROM AN ARTICLE BY

Dr. ANDREW WILSON, F.R.S.E.,

Lecturer on Physiology and Health under the "Combe Trust;" Editor of "Health."

"One important caution should be given, and that is concerning the use of soaps. I would strongly advise all who care for their skin to eschew the use of common soap, which simply roughens and injures the skin, and, if you will be advised by me, I would say never buy those artificially coloured and odoriferous abominations commonly sold under the name of 'Scented' or 'Fancy Soaps' which are the frequent causes of skin eruptions. If I am prepared to recommend any one soap to you, as a satisfactory and scientifically prepared article, I would certainly advise you to buy and use 'Pears' Soap.' Not merely from personal use can I recommend this soap, but I am well content to shelter myself under the names and authority of the late Sir Erasmus Wilson, F.R.S., President of the Royal College of Surgeons; of Doctor Stevenson Macadam, or of Professors Redwood and Attfield, the eminent analytical and chemical lecturers at the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, who testify to its entire purity. Furthermore, I believe it to be very economical, for it contains no free water, and in this respect differs from all other soaps; hence a cake of 'Pears' is really all soap and not soap and water. I know cases of irritable skin which the whole tribe of much-vaunted 'Fancy Soaps' failed to allay, but which disappeared under the use of Pears' Soap, and for the nursery and for the delicate skin of infancy no better or more soothing soap can possibly be used. There can be no doubt that in respect of the care of children, attention to the skin is specially required. If common soaps are irritating to the skin of the adult, (as they unquestionably are), they are doubly and trebly injurious to the delicate skin of the infant and young child. I can vouch that the soap I am recommending is not merely a safe but an advantageous one. It does not irritate the skin; but, while serving as a detergent and cleanser, also acts as an emollient."

PARNELL UNDER A CLOUD

HIS USEFULNESS GONE AS A POLITICAL LEADER.

The O'Shea Divorce Case Brings Out Startling Revelations.—Mrs. O'Shea Found Guilty of Adultery With Parnell—Dillon Spoken of as Leader.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Captain O'Shea, who was sworn as a witness after Sir E. Clarke had concluded his address, testified that when he learned of Mr. Parnell's visits to Eltham, of which he had been ignorant, he quarreled with his wife about them, but on her assurances that there was nothing wrong there was a reconciliation. Mrs. Steele, her sister, also convinced him that all was well. "When I returned from Lisbon," continued the witness, "I heard that Mr. Parnell had been at Eltham. I wrote him and he replied, denying that any ground of scandal then existed. Mrs. O'Shea did likewise, when during the general elections I again heard rumors affecting Mrs. O'Shea and Mr. Parnell. I remonstrated with my wife. She again assured me and declared that the acquaintance was maintained for political reasons. Mrs. O'Shea told me that she knew Parnell was a married man; that he had been secretly married. I had no idea that Parnell was a constant visitor at Eltham in my absence. I never knew that he had his horses at Eltham until my son told me. I abandoned the idea of bringing criminal proceedings for libel against the newspapers because I feared it would make the scandal worse. Seeing a paragraph stating that Mr. Parnell was stopping at Eastbourne with Mrs. O'Shea, I wrote my wife about it. I had no idea she had taken a house at Eastbourne." A letter from Captain O'Shea's son, Gerald, to his father, was read in evidence. In it the young man said that he had heard a voice which he recognized as that of "that awful scoundrel, Parnell," talking to his mother. He would like to have knocked him down, only he did not want to upset his mother, who had told him that the visitor had only come to dinner and would soon be gone. He concluded, "If you want me to knock him down it should be done at the first chance." The witness resumed his testimony by denying all knowledge of his wife's movements with Parnell at the time. He heard later that they had been living together at Brighton. He then filed a petition for divorce. The charges against witness regarding Mrs. Steele were false.

Mrs. Buel, formerly a servant at Brighton, was the next witness. She testified that Mr. Parnell visited Mrs O'Shea every day at the house where she was employed. When he came nobody else would be in the house except Mrs. O'Shea. The couple would be together for hours. The visitor frequently remain as late as 11 o'clock in the evening. On one occasion Mrs. O'Shea went out with him and remained till a late hour. The gentleman slept at the house once when Captain O'Shea was away. Mrs. O'Shea and the gentleman drove out together occasionally. The gentleman used to let himself in with a private key. Witness on one occasion heard voices in Mrs. O'Shea's room and found the door locked.

Caroline Peters, who in 1888 was a servant in the house at Brighton, which was let to Captain O'Shea and family, testified that shortly after the arrival of the family a gentleman, the same as Mr. Parnell, appeared under the name of Charles Stewart, and used to drive out with Mrs. O'Shea at night. The two were together in the dining-room on one occasion for several hours with the door locked. The young ladies explained that their mother didn't want to be disturbed when she had company. At one time "Mr. Stewart" was in the room with Mrs. O'Shea, with the door locked. He frequently slept at the house when Captain O'Shea wasn't there. Once the Captain came home while "Mr. Stewart" was there, and the latter escaped by a back way. He soon afterward came to the front door, rang, and asked to see Captain O'Shea. The witness once saw Mrs. O'Shea pull down the blind and go into "Mr. Stewart's" room.

The next witness offered by the prosecution was a servant who had been employed at the Eltham residence. After a few unimportant questions propounded and answered, witness testified to having on one occasion discovered Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea locked up in the drawing-room. The latter had explained to her that the locking of the door while she was closeted with Mr. Parnell was necessary. The necessity was in turn explained on the hypothesis that agents of secret societies hostile to Mr. Parnell's political plans were everywhere about. In reply to sharp questioning by the counsel for plaintiff, witness told how she had been instructed by Mrs. O'Shea in the event of her being questioned by Capt. O'Shea, to deny positively that Mr. Parnell had visited the house at Eltham. Another servant the second for the day and the last for the prosecution, was then placed upon the stand. The witness simply testified to having at different times in the year 1889 found Parnell and the defendant together alone after midnight.

At this point, Sir Edward Clarke, as counsel for Capt. O'Shea, stated that he believed sufficient evidence had been adduced by the prosecution to demonstrate the innocence of his client and the culpability of the respondent and co-respondent. He would, therefore, announce that the prosecutled was closed.

The defence still being unrepresented either by the principals thereto or by counsel, the case was placed in possession of a special jury by Justice Butt, with a few words explanatory of the rules of law and evidence pertaining to suits such as they had here presented for consideration. Very shortly thereafter the jury returned a verdict. It finds the respondent, Mrs. O'Shea, to be guilty of adultery as alleged, and dismisses the counter-charge of connivance in the crime made by Mrs. O'Shea against her husband. A decree nisi, with the costs of suit and the custody of the young children, was therefore awarded to the petitioner, Captain O'Shea.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Many strong believers in Parnell clung hopefully to the last to the idea that he would come forward and deny O'Shea's charges; but if the woman in such a case refuses to make any contradiction, what can the men do but follow suit? The truth is, that Mrs. O'Shea has made up her mind that a marriage shall follow the divorce suit after the usual interval, and that being so, Parnell could not venture into court to deny anything. But his complete surrender has been a terrible shock to the stricter sect of the Gladstonian party, especially to the venerable leader, who has no toleration for offenses of this description. Parnell may resolve not to give up, but the circumstances will be too strong for him. The invasion of O'Shea's home under the guise of friendship implies a long course of deception.

No political leader in this country has ever survived such an exposure. In the case of Lord Melbourne and Mrs. Norton, both parties asserted their innocence, and the jury found a verdict in their favor. It will be just as impossible in the long run for Parnell to lead his party in Ireland as it was for Sir Charles Dilke to pursue his public career. Attention, therefore, is entered upon the question of, "Who will succeed Parnell? There is a strong feeling in favor of Dillon. He is a man of blameless character, of great parliamentary skill, a brilliant speaker, and the devoted and zealous friend of Ireland. Every man who has been brought into personal contact with him is as much impressed with his earnestness and sincerity as by his abilities. Wm. O'Brien is also mentioned, but he lacks the coolness and self command required for the difficult work to be done in parliament. The Irish party generally will for a time stoutly deny that any change is pending, but it must come. Dillon would bring renewed energy into the Irish campaign and arouse fresh enthusiasm. The finger of destiny points to him as the coming man.

The latest reports current in connection with the O'Shea scandal are that Mr. Parnell will marry Mrs. O'Shea as soon as she is clear from her husband. Owing to the delay of the British divorce system, about seven months will pass before the marriage can take place. The rumors that Mr. Parnell has a wife to whom he was secretly united in wedlock do not find any credit, and no substantial ground has been given for them.

General Sir Evelyn Wood, who, although a near relative, is not on the best of terms with Mrs. O'Shea, has openly stated that as a man of honor, Mr Parnell could take but one step adequate to make a public recognition, and that was to marry Mrs. O'Shea. It is thought that Mr. Parnell, unless there is something in the story of another marriage, will not be averse to this, as he is believed to be deeply attached to Mrs. O'Shea, who retains much of her youthful beauty, and whose family will compare favorably with that of Mr. Parnell as to social position and public distinction.

A ribald sheet has been circulating in London to-day containing a caricature of Parnell in the social balcony scene when he is said to have jumped off the balcony to escape pursuit by Captain O'Shea. Accompanying it is a parody on the balcony scene in Romeo and Juliet, with Parnell as Romeo and Mrs. O'Shea as Juliet. The sheet is having a large sale. On Sunday such a large number of visitors went to Eltham, in Kent, the scene of the alleged episodes, that the local police were obliged to muster in force and turn a number of the crowd back to London.

A MINISTER'S SHAME.

He Makes a Startling Announcement from the Pulpit.

STOCKTON, Nov. 18.—The most profound sensation ever created in church circles in this city was the result of some startling remarks made yesterday morning by Rev. D. L. Munroe from the pulpit of the Presbyterian church, the largest and most fashionable in the city.

Unexpectedly, Mr. Munroe started to make a confession of sin to the fashionable congregation before him. He said that God had commanded him to do so.

Ten years ago, he said, and before his marriage, he had improper relations with women upon promises of marriage which he had never intended to fulfill. Since his marriage, he said, he had been pure in action but not in thought. He then proceeded to tell of female members of his flock toward whom he had improper thoughts. The list embraced married and single ladies, and he mentioned their names publicly before the congregation. Most of his improper thoughts came when he was walking home from prayer meeting with the sisters.

The pastor at the evening service stated that he intended to join the Baptists and spend his time preaching to the women of the low quarters in Stockton.

The startling sermon and public mention of the names of ladies who are prominent in society is the talk of the town to-day. It will result in an investigation by the trustees of the church. A ministerial meeting will be held to investigate the matter. It is understood that Munroe will appear and make further remarks.

Killed in Honduras—The United States Battle Ship Maine—La Blanche Gets Whipped by Kessler—Feigning Insanity to Get a Soft Berth.

TACOMA, Nov. 19.—This morning William P. Alvey was before a commission, consisting of Probate Judge Beverly and a couple of M.D.'s. The doctors questioned Alvey, and learned from him that he had been in an insane asylum two or three times, and filled out the usual blank commitment, declaring him to be suffering from "dementia." After the doctors left the judge had a little talk with the demented one, and concluded he wanted a soft berth in comfortable quarters for the winter, and turned him loose with an injunction to go to work.

America's Latest Ironclad.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—For two years the armored cruiser Maine, the first of the big new vessels to be added to the naval force of the country to fit it to cope with the battle ships of foreign nations on the high seas, has been building in Brooklyn navy yard, and to-morrow she will be launched, with pomp and ceremony. The Maine has been built in pursuance of plans to provide the United States navy with vessels capable of cruising to any ports, and sufficiently protected by armor to be invulnerable to ordinary projectiles, and to hold their own in a contest, save with the giant war-ships which some foreign countries have set afloat. She is the largest vessel in the United States navy, and her complete cost will not be far from $3,000,000.

La Blanche Whipped.

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 19.—The fight in this city to-day between George La Blanche and George Kessler, a local fighter of some repute, resulted in a victory for Kessler in the thirteenth round. The fight took place upon the race track near this city, and was witnessed by fully 2,000 people. The two men appeared in the ring at 4 o'clock, La Blanche looking too fleshy for heavy work, while Kessler was in perfect condition. The champion was over-confident from the start and commenced with a "see-me-do-him" air that would have done credit to the Bowery.

The first round was spent in feeling of each other, but in the second the Marine undertook one of his famous rushes, evidently satisfied that it would finish the fight. To his surprise he was met with a stinger in the mouth, which spoiled the rush and set him to thinking he had no snap there, and he concluded to try wrestling, throwing Kessler and falling on him with all his weight.

In the fourth Kessler stopped another rush, this time practically closing the Marine's left eye.

In the fifth and sixth each fought hard for the other's wind, and in the seventh La Blanche threw Kessler again.

In the eighth Kessler began to make the fight, rushing the Marine upon the ropes, and securing first blood.

La Blanche won the first knockdown in the ninth, and threw Kessler again in the tenth, but it did no good, as the Montana boy rushed him on the ropes three times in the next round.

In the thirteenth round La Blanche showed up so groggy that Kessler started in to finish him. Once he forced him on the ropes and again down in his own corner, when La Blanche, feeling that the fight was going against him and preferring to lose on a foul to a knockout, deliberately kicked Kessler in the groin. This virtually ended the fight as the referee gave it to Kessler on the foul.

If ever a man was fairly whipped in the ring, Kessler whipped La Blanche. The Marine had to be carried to his corner and helped to his dressing room, while the Montana pugilist, whom he was going to beat in two rounds, jumped up and ran to his room apparently as fresh as when he began.

Killed in Honduras.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 19.—Intelligence was received to-night by cable that during the recent revolution in Spanish Honduras, Col. Baker was shot and killed. Col. Baker was brother of Page M. Baker, of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, and Capt. Baker, of the steamer Hutchins, of the Morgan line. He was formerly employed in the custom office here, but was some years ago invited by President Morgan to make his home in Hunduras, where he was appointed chief of police, of Tequcigalpa, Col. Clark Buyer, late of the 9th U. S. cavaley, being his assistant. Several other Americans were in his party. Particulars have not been received.

Arrested For Importing Lottery Tickets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Albert Jarnulowsky, banker at Ludlow and Canal streets, is in trouble over a batch of lottery tickets imported into this city from Germany a few weeks ago, in all valued at $20,000. When the tickets arrived they were seized by the customs inspector. Jarnulowsky made every effort to procure their release in order that he might send them back and not be compelled to stand the loss. He wanted the district attorney's office to see what could be done. He was told he had better see Comstock in regard to the matter. Just then Comstock walked in and seeing the Russian banker, said, "I have a warrant for your arrest," and a detective was ordered to place Jarnulowsky in custody. The charge is that of bringing lottery tickets into the state. The banker furnished $1,000 for his presence when wanted and was allowed to go home.

Control of the Pacific Mail.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Geo. J. Gould was voted out of the presidency of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. a few months ago, and now is to be voted back into it. Representatives of large interests in the company have sought Mr. Gould during the past few days and asked him if he would resume the place at the head of the company. He consulted with his father, Jay Gould, who on assurances given counselled him to accept. Mr. Gould was ousted from his position in the Pacific Mail through C. P. Huntington, while directing the management of the company. Gould proposed some progressive operations. For one thing he contemplated an extension of the company's business by putting on a steamship between Tacoma and China. Huntington thought the carrying out of that scheme would throw the business into the hands of the Northern Pacific Railway, which would otherwise go to his roads, the Central and Southern Pacific. He therefore secured enough stock to put in J. B. Houston in place of Mr. Gould. Mr. J. B. Houston had formerly been president. Mr. Huntington did not possess a majority of stock himself, but acquired a voting majority through other holders. Now it is stated that a new combination has been made up, with enough stock to nominate the company's affairs and leave Huntington out of the question altogether. There have been heavy transactions in Pacific Mail stock recently, and what was offered for sale was promptly absorbed by the anti-Huntington interest. It is not proposed, according to present plans, to let the months roll by until next election day before restoring Gould to power, but to show the present management that it is in a minority, and it is consequently in order for it to step down and out. Henry Villard is said to be a member of the new Pacific Mail combination. He would naturally like to see the Pacific Mail run steamers between Tacoma and the Orient for the benefit that the Northern Pacific would derive from it. The matter seems to resolve itself more directly into a conflict between Huntington and Gould.

THE SURVIVORS ACCOUNT.

The Men on the Serpent Washed Off in Dozens—Fighting the Waves.

CORUNNA, Nov. 16.—The British man-of-war Lapwing brought the survivors of H. M. S. Serpent to Corunna to-day. A correspondent of the United Press boarded the vessel and obtained an interview with the fortunate men. Burton, the first one questioned, said that the disaster to the Serpent occurred at 10.30 on Monday evening. The night was a misty one, but there was no fog. The rock on which the vessel struck was covered by water and could not be seen. All on board were below except the officers and six men on watch. They all rushed up on feeling the shock, but no panic resulted and the orders of the officers were promptly obeyed. The large boat was soon lowered but was almost instantly smashed to pieces among the rocks and its occupants perished. It was useless to lower other boats and all efforts to throw a cable ashore failing; the situation was a hopeless one. The men were constantly being washed overboard by heavy seas. Burton says that one wave washed away twelve men in a group. After an hour of this terrible experience the captain gave the men leave to abandon the ship and safe themselves as they thought best. Burton jumped everboard wearing a lifebelt such as all the watch had on. He did not see any one follow him. He swam for the shore, for three hours fighting the waves, and finally managed to get to a spot sheltered by the rocks, where the water was calmer and he was able to swim ashore. He was completely exhausted and his leg was somewhat bruised from the rocks. It was pitch dark. He rested for some time, and on starting to walk inland he met a comrade named Luton, with whom he walked until he came to a village, two miles from the wreck. The people there conveyed them to Camarinas. Burton is quite well now. He assisted at Camerinas in identifying such of the corpses as were in a recognizable condition. Luton and the third survivor, Gould, were too ill to be on deck and the correspondent found them in bed below. Luton sat up in bed and chatted brightly. He confirmed Burton's story. He himself was washed overboard half an hour after the shock. He had no belt on. He devoted his strength to trying to avoid the spots where he heard the sea beating upon the rocks. After an hour and a half of this struggling he reached calm water and landed on a sandy beach. He then first noticed that a piece of flesh had been torn from his leg. He could not tell how the injury occurred. He had not felt any pain before, but now every step was torture. He is now improving rapidly. Both Burton and Luton believe that the Serpent deviated from her course on account of the weather. The moment that the Cape Vilano light was sighted the vessel struck the rocks. The light was very weak. Burton thinks that the Serpent sank soon after he left. Gould is still suffering from the effects of his severe experience, and is very feverish. He is not allowed to talk to visitors. When the Lapwing left the scene of the wreck 48 of the bodies had been recovered and buried. Many of them were unidentified. A majority of the victims were stripped, and were killed by being dashed on the rocks.

TAXING MINERALS.

Mining Men Protest Against the Proposal of the Quebec Government.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—At a meeting held at Sherbrooke yesterday of representatives of the mining industry in this province to protest against the proposal of the Quebec Government to place an export tax on minerals, resolutions were passed deploring such a measure, and the meeting was unanimous that it should not be passed, as such a tax in the present state of our mining development would be a great public misfortune.

CHAPTER XIX.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

It must not be supposed that the sudden and remarkable change which had taken place in Mrs. Cameron's physical appearance had passed unnoticed or uncommented upon by society. It was too widely discussed, and awakened an equal number of surmises and questionable remarks.

"They say that Marie Antoinette's hair changed in a night," it was not uncommon to hear. "But then there was a reason for that!" was almost invariably added. And the curiosity and interest which was thus aroused in both the male and female bosom, surrounded the youthful bride with a halo of romance. But there were some (there always are some) who could not see the rose for the thorns, or the star for the mist of their own breath blowing across it. From these, one could hear now and then sharp comments upon the pride which made Mrs. Cameron forget the courtesy due to her old friends. But such derogatory remarks were uttered mainly in asides and only now and then did they come to the ears of her they most concerned. But they did come sometimes. Were they to blame also for the increasing pallor of her cheek, and the general decadence of her health which Dr. Cameron could not but notice? He began to watch her more closely, fearing to detect under her languor and growing melancholy the traces of disease yet more serious than the rheumatism of which she now and then complained.

She shrank when she found his eye upon her, and often at some petty shock, like the ringing of the door-bell or the sound of an unexpected voice over her shoulder, she gave such nervous starts that he became seriously alarmed and commenced to doctor her in good earnest.

It was evening. They had just returned from dining with Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex. There was a chilliness in the atmosphere of the Gretorex mansion which he felt himself, and while he was conscious of being an agreeable son-in-law to the proud railway king, he was also conscious of possessing no hold either upon his heart or that of his aristocratic wife. But as they never showed affection even to each other, he accepted their formal regard and was satisfied.

They were sitting in the parlor, and Dr. Cameron, anxious to behold her smile again, was talking gaily. Suddenly he paused and asked her a question about some one they had seen. She answered but vaguely; her thoughts were elsewhere. Judging from the direction of her gaze, they were on herself, she sat where she could see her own image mirrored in the glass before her, and it was upon this elegant figure, clad in grey velvet and pearls, that her eyes were fixed.

Her husband's eyes followed hers and glistened merrily.

"An imposing figure," he smiled. "Did you think you would ever be a famous beauty, Genevieve?"

She knelt down at his feet.

"Am I pretty?" she asked—"to you?"

"No," he returned, "you are not pretty, you are beautiful, and just a little awe-inspiring. I love you, and I wonder at you; you are so different—"

She did not wait for him to finish.

"You love me," she murmured. "How much do you love me, Walter? Enough to care more for me than for my beauty? Would your heart still glow and your arms still embrace me, if instead of pleasing your eye I only appealed to your sympathies and affections? Do not say yes, carelessly, Walter, for I am in earnest. Speak! I am strong enough to hear."

He drew her to his side and answered gravely:

"You are my wife; you are the woman I have chosen for my own. I love your beauty—How can I help it?—and I love what gives that beauty life. Had I to choose, were it given me to have this lovely form, these brilliant eyes, this whole harmonious and speaking figure, with a cold and treacherous soul within it; or to have your heart, your intellect, your nature in a faded or marred body, I should take——"

"Which?"

Her eyes were burning, her lips were parted, she was breathless.

"Your heart and nature; I know I should, and I rejoice in it. You have charmed me, Genevieve; I cannot resist your spell which holds me and interests me more than any amount of grace or beauty could do."

"Then I am an enigma, only an enigma to you. When I am solved—"

"Will you ever be solved, Genevieve?"

She did not look as if she would. The depth of her regard, which was always remarkable, never struck him more forcibly than at this moment.

"I think the day will come," she remarked, "when you will no longer wonder at me. Will it be also true that you will no longer love me?"

She did not seem to expect a reply, and he did not give any. He encouraged her with a kiss on the hand that lay in his.

"I am; you want to know what I am going to ask next," she pursued. "Would you love me—" she dropped her eyes from his face—"if you found that I had kept something back from you which I ought to have told; that—that I had ever been in love before—that I had a secret in my life, as many women have, which, while it it argues nothing wrong in my heart, still lends to my hours many regrets, and to my thoughts a shadow which all present brightness cannot quite charm away?"

"Genevieve!" His face had changed; his lips took a hard line. "Have you any such secret in your life? Did you ever love another man?"

She looked up, met his eye and quaked.

"Do you demand to know?" she asked.

His brows contracced; he thought of the promise she had given him to always tell him the truth, and hesitated. They were married; she loved him now, and any such raking up of old by-gones was certainly unwise as it was unpleasant. He would not press his question; he found he loved her too well.

"I demand nothing," was his reply. "The past is past; and we no longer have anything to do with it. As long as your heart is all mine now—and I am sure it is—what is it to me that you once smiled for a week or a month upon some one else. I would dare wager that no one but myself ever touched these lips."

Her smile flashed out bright and dazzling. "No one ever did," she said, and at that we laid at that smile, his brow cleared and he almost laughed. "Most every life has had some harmless flirtations in it," he remarked. "I adored a girl myself once—for a fortnight. The value of true gold is more apparent after some slight handling of dross."

She did not seem to hear what he said.

"I wish I could see you really cheerful again," he ventured. "You are not ill enough to look so sad.

"I have read," she began, slowly, and as if pursuing her own train of thought, "that love is all powerful with some men. Is there truth in such tales? Is there a man among your acquaintance, for instance, who will be willing to sacrifice any really good thing he possessed for the sake of an unfortunate woman who was dependent upon him for happiness?"

"I hope—" he commenced.

But she stopped him with an imperious gesture.

"Do you know of one man," she asked, "who would share disgrace with a woman cheerfully?"

"Disgrace is a hard word," he asserted, "and cheerfully does not readily go with it."

"Yet women know how to join the two," said she, "when it comes to forsaking all for the man they love."

"I know; but women who love are angels, while men are never more than human under any circumstances."

She was pale, and looked as if an icy breath had passed over her.

"Is reputation so dear to you men?" she demanded. "Are your souls bound up in appearing well before the world?"

"Genevieve," said he, "these are curious questions; I do not understand why you put them, nor will I ask. But since you are in this humor I will acknowledge that the keenest agony that can be inflicted on a proud man is to rob him of his honorable position amongst men. He may suffer acutely from other losses. But take away from him the respect of men and he has no career, no life. He is but the shadow of a man, a hapless, blighted wretch whose true place is underground, and not amongst the men and women whom he cannot look honestly in the face."

"But——"

"I am thinking of an extreme case. Such does not come often to a man from a woman; it is more apt to come to a woman from a man."

"Yet there have been instances," she ventured.

"Yes," he concurred, "there have been instances."

A short silence followed these words.

"I do not know which to pity the most," she murmured at last; "the man who has lost so much by a woman or the woman who has caused the man she loves to lose so much. I think her pain must be the keener."

He shook his head.

"A woman who could commit a disgraceful act would not be apt to be hyper-sensitive about its effect upon her husband."

"I do not know. There are acts which do not seem to be disgraceful at the time, yet which may lead to shame. Were a woman to commit such, and were it that woman's fortune to be married—"

"One must pity her husband," he interposed.

She looked up, met his gaze and drew herself back into her old place at his side.

"You spoke of an extreme case just now," she softly whispered.

"Let us put it at its extremest. Say that I had done an act that if known would brand me for infamy: would your love be so slight that it would give way under the revelation, or would it hold firm, and though changed, remain to solace and encourage one who—who—never realized—" Her voice sank to an unintelligible murmur.

"Genevieve," he cried, "these are not the questions of an excited fancy. There is meaning back of all this. What meaning? Is there disgrace lurking in the air for us! Have you done anything—"

But here her laugh broke out merrily and shrill. He stopped in his turn and looked at her in a sort of cloudy amazement. She rose and made him a mocking little courtesy; then she suddenly grew grave.

"Forgive me," she entreated. "I had a notion to test the extent of your love. I—I think there is yet opportunity for it to deepen and broaden. I did not know my happiness would hang upon your regard. Your regard," she repeated, "not the world's, Walter."

Fondly he surveyed her. He could have kissed the hem of her robe as she sat there, but he contented himself with a look.

"I am afraid," she softly resumed, "that I have many false notions. Kept to a petty round of thoughts and feelings, I have seen too little of real human life to realize all that there is in it. I was a child, or worse, I was a soul asleep, and only now am I really awake, and realize what is required of a woman when she loves and is loved. But I know now and am at once happy and miserable, triumphant and overwhelmed. Am I raving, Walter? I have kept so much pent up in my heart that I may go too far in my relief at speaking. Do you mind my talking so freely? Shall I stop and be proper again—and melancholy?"

"Do not be melancholy," he began—

But there seemed little danger of this. She was all smiles. "Kiss me!" she suddenly cried, lifting up a face bewitching in its mixture of appeal and audacity.

"That antidote I am willing to administer ad infinitum," he smiled "only you must promise me—"

"Not to ask any more questions?" she finished. "I will, and if trouble comes—"

She stopped with a start. The door-bell had rung.

The doctor woke as from a dream.

"Visitors or patients?" he quried.

It was evidently the latter; for just then the front door was opened, and a gentleman came in, followed by a decently dressed woman, who no sooner found herself in the luxurious hall than she seemed to shrink together and almost cower past the doors she had to pass on her way to the office. The doctor wondering at this, moved to follow. But before doing so, he gave his wife one other look and found her so smiling and so radiant, that he did not speak but passed on with lifted brow and a totally satisfied air. As for her she preserved her smile without seeming effort till the curtain had fallen across the door-way leading into the office. But once left entirely alone, she sank back in the seat she had occupied and for one wild moment seemed to give way to a despair that was none the less deep that it was silent. But she speedily controlled even this tone of weakness, and rising, looked again at herself in the glass, and adjuring the enchanting figure that confronted her, said:

"If you are beautiful, use that beauty to preserve your happiness. It can be done, and the incentive given you is great enough for anything. His peace of mind rests upon your success. Be successful then, at all hazards save that of untruth."

She was still glowing with the excitement of the moment, when the doctor's returning step was heard falling heavily on the carpet. Turning, her ardent color faded rapidly away. The gentleman who accompanied Dr. Cameron was Mr. Gryce.

PARNELL PAYS COSTS.

Found Guilty of Adultery With Mrs. O'Shea—The Captain Exonerated.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The trial of the O'Shea divorce suit was resumed this morning. The first witness was a servant at O'Shea's house at Eltham at the time O'Shea charges Parnell with paying clandestine visits to his wife. She testified that Mrs. O'Shea and Parnell were once locked in the drawing room. Mrs O'Shea afterwards explained the locking of the door as essential to the safety of Parnell, as members of secret societies were prowling about the vicinity. She also told the witness to deny that Parnell had visited the house. Another servant testified that Mrs. O'Shea and Parnell were locked in a room after midnight. Mrs. O'hea's former coachman testified to driving Parnell to Mrs. O'Shea's residence after midnight. An ex-page testified that he had lived in the service of Mrs. O'Shea at Eastbourne; that Parnell lived in the same house. Other witnesses testified that Mrs. O'Shea took the Eastbourne house and paid the rent; that Parnell resided there, and also at a house in Regent's Park, which Mrs. O'Shea rented.

Mrs. Steele, sister of Mrs. O'Shea, whom the latter charged with adultery with Captain O'Shea took the stand and denied the charge.

One of the jurymen insisted that petitioner be cross-examined on the counter charges made by his wife, and the petitioner was recalled. He testified that he had lived apart from his wife at her desire. He denied the charges of cruelty, and said he had always treated her with kindness. He had invited Parnell to his house after challenging him to fight a duel, because he was convinced that his suspicions regarding his wife and Parnell were baseless.

In summing up to the jury the judge dwelt on the charge of connivance made by Mrs. O'Shea, and asked why there was necessity for all the guise resorted to by Parnell if the petitioner had connived at his wife's infidelity.

The case was then given to the jury, who returned a verdict that adultery had been committed by Mrs. O'Shea and Parnell, and that there had been no connivance on the part of Captain O'Shea. The court granted a decree of divorce, and that co-respondent pay the cost and that custody of the younger children be awarded to petitioner.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Telegraph publishes Parnell's political obituary, and says he must cease for the present at least to lean on the Nationalist party.

It is reported that the followers of Parnell do not desire him to retire unless by his own volition, in which event the leadership of the Irish party will be vested in a commission, of which Justin McCarthy will be president.

DUBLIN, Nov. 17.—Parnell, in a letter to the Freeman's Journal, reminds his followers of the importance of being in parliament on the opening day. He says it is unquestionable that the coming session will be one of combat from first to last, and that great issues depend upon its course.

DUBLIN, Nov. 17.—The London correspondent of the Freeman's Journal declares that Parnell has not the slightest intention of resigning either the leadership of the party or his duties in parliament.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Provincial newspapers join in the chorus of the denunciation of Parnell. Several Gladstone papers advise his retirement.

The Chronicle says: "The 'middle-class electors' in England will certainly resist any appeal, even by Gladstone, to support a party led by Parnell."

The News says: "The political principles of parties are independent of accidents to individual leadership. The discredit attaching to Parnell will not reflect on his party."

The Times says: "If Parnell intends to retain the leadership of his party he will place Gladstone in a serious dilemma."

The Standard thinks the Gladstonians will court moral destruction if they continue even in political intimacy with Parnell.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW,

SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

SMOKING AND CHEWING.

How Different Nations of the East Use Tobacco.

Children and Women Who Use Their Ears as Cigar-Holders—Pretty Women Who Consume a Hundred Cigarettes Each Day.

The baby smokers of the world are found in Siam and Burmah, writes F. G. Carpenter in the Louisville Courier-Journal. I saw little tots of four, as naked as on the day they were born, trotting about Bangkok with cigarettes in their mouths, and the babies of Rangoon and Mandalay are taught to chew the betel nut, mixed with tobacco, as soon as they are weaned. The Siamese children, like their fathers, use their ears as cigarette and cigar-holders, and the lack of clothing and pockets on the part of the little ones necessitates their carrying these articles over their ears, as the American clerk carries his pencil or pen. I saw one noble Siamese boy with a shaved head and a string about his waist, who had a cigarette over each ear and another in his mouth. After a few moments he threw away the cigarette in his mouth and began to chew betel, squirting out the blood-red saliva until he made a puddle in the road beside him. His father, who was with him, was also smoking, and his mother had a cigarette between her lips. When the party went away the mother took up the naked smoking boy, and balancing him on her hip, walked off, both smoking as they went. The thousand odd women who make up the harem of the Siamese King all smoke and chew, and it takes a good part of his Majesty's ten million dollars a year to pay his tobacco bill. Each lady has to have her betel spittoon, which is of decorated china, the size of a coffee cup, and, if she is a favorite, she has also a silver box in which to carry her tobacco and betel nut.

The women of Burmah, like the smokers of Siam, use their ears as cigar-holders, but they use them in a different way. Every Burmese girl prides herself on the size of the hole she can make in the lobes of her ears, and I have seen Burmese ears which had holes in them as big around as a napkin ring. These holes are made when the girls are young, and the lobe of the ear stretches and grows until it gets as big around as the thumb of a big-boned man. Into these holes some of the poorer women of Burmah put their cigarettes or cigars when they move from one place to another. Cigars are more used than any thing else, and the Burmese cigar is the biggest of its kind in general use. It is from eight to ten inches long, and is often more than an inch in diameter. The Burmese women are very beautiful, and even their big cigars can not take away the beauty of their juicy red lips. They make the mouth look a little large while they are in them, but it resumes its natural size when the young lady, holding the cigar between her two first fingers, blows the smoke out in a stream. It is not unusual for a Burmese maiden to make her lover a bundle of cigars as a present during their courtship, and some of the best of the Burmese imported cigars are made by women. They have their cigar-booths in the bazars, and they know how to sell at a profit. The Burmese always smoke after meals, and they chew the betel nut at the same time that they smoke, though many of them only chew in the intervals between the smokes. The Buddhist priests of Siam and Burmah are inveterate smokers, and a common sight is a crowd of bare-headed, shaved-pated men in yellow gowns trotting along with cigars or cigarettes in their mouths and with bowls in their hands going around to collect the offerings of rice which the people give them for their sustenance.

The Burmese are very social in their smoking, and I saw cigars passed from one sweet maiden to another in the bazars, and I saw a young man accept with a smile the cigar of a belle and smoke it while she waited upon me and tried to sell me some silk at an extravagant rate. Smoking is common during courtship, and I doubt not that these big Burmese cigars undergo the same method of exchange as does the wad of succulent gum among the lovers in the mountains of Tennessee.

It is different in India. Love-making there is a matter of bargain and sale, and such smoking as is done during the making of matches is between the match-makers and the fathers who wish to sell or bind their girls to infant marriages. The women of India smoke, but they do not do it during courtship, and they practically have no courtship. In some parts of the country tobacco, like opium, is used to a certain extent to lessen the pangs of hunger and to decrease the appetite. It is raised in every province in India, and very nearly three-quarters of a million dollars' worth are exported yearly. The Indian pipes are of all kinds and descriptions. A very common one stands about as high as a base-ball club. At its bottom is a bowl as big around as a cocoanut, and often, in fact, made of a cocoanut. This contains water. It has a hole inside of it, and at its top there is a pipe about an inch or an inch and a half in diameter, which runs up for two feet, and at the top of which there is a bowl in which the tobacco is placed. The smoker sucks a hole at the side of the cocoanut, and he sometimes has a flexible tube with a mouthpiece, the end of which is inserted in this hole, and the pipe then stands upon the ground. The hookah, or water-pipe, is in use to some extent among the Mohammedans of India, and cigars and cigarettes are common. They are very cheap and are not very good.

THE WIZARD RABBI.

He Told the Judge How Many Days He Was Going to Get.

An interesting case of "thought reading" came before the county court of Buda-Pesth a few days ago, writes a Vienna correspondent. The accused, a lively little man, was known as "The Wisard Rabbi," or "The Thought Reader of Czernowitz." He was charged by a tradesman's assistant with cheating him out of a florin. On the table in front of the judge were the corpora delicti, consisting of a number of papers covered with hieroglyphics, two volumes of the Babylonian Talmud and a bundle of circulars, which ran thus: "I can read the name, occupation, past and future of any man in his face. I can read his thoughts and give him good advice, particularly in matters concerning love, conjugal happiness, different illnesses and traveling."

The first question put to the prisoner invited him to state precisely the nature of his profession.

Prisoner—I am a "thought reader." There are no secrets for me. By means of mathematics I can read every body's thoughts. That is the so-called "Talmudian art." I am now writing an important work, which will shortly be published.

Judge—Can you give the court a specimen of your art?

Prisoner—Why not?

Judge—Then tell me how many documents there are in this drawer where I have my hand.

Prisoner—A little patience, please. Now, take part of the papers and put them on one side, and let me then glance at the remainder. There—how many have you put aside?

Judge—Fifteen.

Prisoner—(without a moment's hesitation)—Then there are thirty-one altogether.

Judge—Quite right; you have guessed correctly.

Hereupon followed an altercation between the plaintiff and the prisoner, after which the bench entered into a brief consultation. When the judge was about to pronounce sentence the accused exclaimed:

"I have read his thoughts again; he is going to send me to prison for four days."

Judge—Quite so. Right again. You will go to jail for four days. Call the next case.

DIDN'T LIKE THE SERMON.

Sharp Criticism Upon a Preacher Who Repeated Paul's Epistles.

There is a familiar story about how Daniel Webster, when he was practicing law in New Hampshire, loftily denounced a quotation from a text-book made by a rival attorney as absurd and untenable, upon which the opposing lawyer quietly explained that the passage so contemptuously treated had been introduced into the volume from one of Lord Mansfield's decisions, that great jurist's exact language being preserved. The following anecdote about a famous old character in Whitley County, Ky., has much the same flavor. Joshua Barnett was a wag and a religious orator, and possessed a prodigious memory. The Jellico News tells the story:

"Uncle Josh, as he was generally called, had an appointment to preach one Sunday at an out-of-the-way log school-house in his neighborhood, and two noted lights of a rival denomination attended the meeting for the purpose of criticising the sermon. One was named Jones, the other Warman. Uncle Josh, who, it appears, was aware of their intentions, concluded to checkmate them, and instead of preaching a sermon he commenced repeating from memory and without any comment whatever one of the Epistles of St. Paul. For nearly an hour chapter after chapter fell from his lips accompanied by a grave and decorous gesture and intonation. Brother Jones at the end of some thirty minutes arose with grave disapproval written all over his face and retired from the house, and took a seat in the yard upon a barkless and prostrate tree, which was used as a horse block. Brother Warman stood it some ten minutes longer, when he, too, arose and joined Brother Jones. 'Well, Brother Warman, what do you think of such a sermon?' said Brother Jones. 'Think?' said Brother Warman, 'why, I think if the good Lord will forgive me this time for listening to such rotten doctrine I will never be guilty again.'"

Whales Off North Carolina.

Every year from one to ten whales are caught by the whale fishermen under Cape Lookout, who have their boats, harpoons, trying-out apparatus and all other paraphernalia of "shore fishing." A lookout is constantly kept, and every now and then the reward is in a large whale. This animal lives in cold water, and it is surprising to find them on our coast so near the gulf stream, says the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen. We have been informed that there is an inshore Arctic current setting into the bight under Lookout and down toward the Frying Pan shoals, and into this basin of cold water the whales are tempted by the peculiar food on which they live, and which they find there abundantly.

A Strike of School-Boys.

The strike of the Scottish school-boys which began in Hawick has spread to Glasgow, Govan, Greenock, Port Glasgow and other places in the west of Scotland, and also into Ayrshire and about Aberdeen. The boys have formed regular labor-like parades, with banners and cries for "shorter hours." The strike has also spread into England. The other day one hundred malcontents paraded the streets of Barnet demanding "abolition of the cane, less hours in school, less parsing, and no home lessons."

Canada's New Exportation.

"It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." We are going to get live lobsters from Canada. That is very good news for our chefs and our gourmets. Lobsters are getting more scarce, and therefore less accessible to the householder year by year, and I should almost venture to say that I have seen prawns in some parts of the world that would weigh as much as the infantine lobsters that are now exposed at the fish shops. I see no reason why the importation of live lobsters from Canada should be a difficulty. It used to be said that American oysters would never stand the voyage, but they have survived the trial, and they now contribute very usefully to the commissariat of the metropolis.—London Life.

The Same Can be Done in Every Home.

A gentleman well known in Montreal, and who travels considerably through Canada, quite recently visited the manufacturers of the celebrated Diamond Dyes and Diamond Paints, and requested to be shown over the large building.

During the hour spent in viewing the offices, workrooms, printing room, store-rooms, as well as watching the preparation of the dyestuffs, he said: "In the city of Hamilton I had occasion to visit some dear friends, who during the evening drew my attention to various pieces of decorative and fancy work which had been made and very artistically finished by my hostess and her two daughters. They astonished me with the information that the cost of each article was very trifling; indeed, like doubting Thomas, I felt inclined to doubt, but was assured that every statement was true."

"Fancy articles in common woods were stained in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and looked as well as the real woods, and some pieces looked like real ivory. Articles of metal and glass were covered with a lovely colored lacquer or Varnish quite transparent; and old frames had been beautifully gilded and bronzed. Grasses, Mosses and Everlasting Flowers were gorgeously colored. Photographs and sketches were exquisitely shaded and tinted."

"Then I was shown some rich floor mats made from wool and cotton rags, and richly dyed with the most effective and suitable colors; these, before their manufacture was explained to me, I took to be real Oriental mats."

"All this vast variety of rich and useful house decoration, and useful work, was of course all done through the agency of Diamond Dyes and Diamond Paints, which I now see you preparing to send off to all parts of the Dominion. I am not astonished that your trade is so large, and your goods so popular."

Have been Leading Subjects in his Teaching.

Students are requested to ask for proofs of the following facts: That after acting as Head Master for a year in Smythe street Academy, Wakefield, he resigned receiving a flattering testimonial and presentation. For eight years after he was Head Master in St. Charles' Grammar School, London, and on his resignation in 1883, he received the highest possible testimonial from his managers. Two years later, on resigning his appointment as Science Lecturer, and First Classical Master in St. Cuthbert's Grammar School, Newcastle, the Lord Bishop of Newcastle, Canon Ramsay, and the managers gave him their highest commendation. After this he became Principal of the New Cross High School, and of Bath House College, Twickenham. From successful students preparing for Cambridge, London, Durham, Trinity, Edinburgh Universities; the Law, Medical, Local, Army, Engineering College, and Science examinations, about 50 letters are open to inspection.

Students can take Single Class Subjects, or the Course, and payments will be monthly.

A large number of Rooms are Furnished FOR BOARDERS.

As a teacher Mrs. Pegg holds the certificate of the Lords of the Council on education, England; First Class Kindergarten, Singing, and Science Certificates; and for about 20 years (10 as Head Mistress) was employed in the largest schools in England.

Evening Classes in all Subjects will be commenced at 7 p. m., on Monday, Nov. 10th.

Students can enter for Single classes, or for the course.

BONUSES TO SETTLERS.

The new policy propounded by the Minister of Agriculture in point of common sense is on a par with everything that has issued from Ottawa of recent years. To induce settlement in the Northwest Mr. CARLING offers a cash bonus from the Dominion treasury. For the head of the family the bonus will be fifteen dollars, and for each member thereof over twelve years old seven dollars and a half, with five dollars additional to each member of the family who subsequently takes up a homestead within six months after arrival in Canada. From the announcement in the Government papers it appears that only settlers from Europe are to be entitled to bonuses. "Why is this?" inquires the Ottawa Free Press. How should it be that a foreign immigrant should receive a bonus while the native Canadian who settles on our prairies will get nothing? Mr. CARLING's scheme of bribing men to take up lands in the Northwest, continues the Free Press, is doomed to failure, for a variety of reasons. In the first place it will encourage a system of "bounty jumping," and those agents who hunt up emigrants for Canada on the other side of the Alantic for the sake of the commissions paid them by the government will receive additional encouragement. The Northwest will swarm with bounty jumpers, to the great injury of the country. The man who requires to be bribed to take up a farm in the Northwest is not likely to make a valuable settler. Moreover, Mr. CARLING's bonus policy will place in the hands of American land agents a weapon which can be used effectively in decrying our Northwest. The American agent can say: "Why, the Canadian Northwest cannot be of much account when the government are obliged not only to give the lands away but to pay men for taking them."

SECULAR PENSIONERS.

The Montreal Star, usually Conservative in its treatment of current matters, applies a caustic pen to the Presbyterian church in relation to its treatment of its aged and infirm ministers. According to the Star, "one of the wealthiest corporations in Canada has sixty-one pensioners, who have given from twenty-four to forty years of their lives to its service; and the largest annuity enjoyed by any of these pensioners is $220." These men, who, after earning incomes of from $328 upwards per annum, until incapacitated for further labor, are turned out to live or to starve, which ever they find the easier, on pensions of about four dollars a week, and, continues the Star, the neglect of the aged and infirm ministers is but one manifestation out of many of the insincerity of the wealthy churchgoers as a class, and what is true of the Presbyterian Church is no less true of other churches. How are we to reconcile the presence of so large a proportion of the wealthier classes in Christian congregations with the fact, that usury, covetousness and oppression of the poor are characteristic even of this age? The only rational explanation is that most of the rich men, who are the pillars of the churches, do not believe in the eternal verities to which they formally assent. Their church membership is more or less of an imposture. They go to church because it is considered respectable to go to church, and as an example to the masses. They expect their preachers to be orthodox in their teaching, eloquent in their exhortations and correct in their deportment, because all these things are highly proper in a minister, and they are what ministers are paid for. But if the secrets of their hearts were known they must look upon earnestness in religion as an amiable weakness, and they no doubt look upon religion as a very good thing for the clergy; but they must regard the precepts of Christianity as utterly impracticable for a successful business man in the nineteenth century. As to the justice of these charges we leave them for the accused to settle with their own consciences, but it must be admitted that an annuity of $220 per annum is absurdly small, is not in fact sufficient, to meet the plain necessities of life. No man should be required to live on less than a dollar a day, and this sum in many instances must prove wholly inadequate. It is not to the point that these men are not permitted to suffer; that in line of their scanty allowance they are the beneficiaries of the assistance of kind friends. If these men are worth pensioning at all they should be made independent of fitful and uncertain outside benevolence. The Presbyterian or any other church should provide decently for its veteran ministers, and then if there be a balance it may properly be devoted to the Christianization of the heathen.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

In view of the financial collapse of the Argentine republic, together with the tremendous amount of British capital involved, the Oregonian surmises the eventual occupation of that country by Great Britain, as was the case with Egypt, and points out that in such an event it would come, probably, within the category of the "Monroe doctrine." After pointing out the causes which led to the occupation of Egypt, the Oregonian goes on to say:

"There will be the same reason for British interference that existed in Egypt; indeed, a stronger reason, for the natural resources of the Argentine republic are vastly superior to those of Egypt, and its revenue yielding capacity, under good management, much greater. With English energy and intelligence interested in the development of the country, and English thrift and vigor in control of the financial administration, interest on the bonds would not only be paid, but the country would be brought into a condition of prosperity which would undoubtedly give them a premium in the market."

But for all this tribute, the Oregonian apprehends that the occupation of the Argentine would raise the question of the "Monroe doctrine," "test the sincerity of that vague and disputed principle," and compel the United States to decide once for all whether it is their mission to guarantee the freedom of American soil from foreign occupation and protect the autonomy of American republics, and in anticipation that such might be the decision of the American people the Oregonian cries, "hurry up the navy," as probably that "vague and disputed principle" will require to be supported by force of arms. It is probable that if any of the despotic governments in Europe attempt to set up in business in South America, the "Monroe doctrine" would be reduced to a principle, and would be backed up by ships of war. In the case of England, however, an exception might be made. England is as democratic as the United States, and as it is her habit to assimilate conquered people so far as is practicable, the occupation of the Argentine republic would be the reverse of a calamity, nor yet constitute a menace to any country. It is begging the question to go to South America to enforce the "Monroe doctrine." If the "Monroe doctrine" is worth enforcing at all, with reference to Great Britain, it should be applied to Canada. The "Monroe doctrine," we should suppose, like charity, should begin at home. If England should occupy any of the South American states as security for her just dues, guaranteeing the people the rights and privileges of Englishmen, it being understood at the same time, that said occupation would immensely develop the material interests of the country. The interposition of the "Monroe doctrine" would be an act of supreme selfishness, an exhibition of the arrogance of power But it is not likely that England will undertake the occupancy of the Argentine republic to secure her little bill against that country. From the way things are shaping themselves, the Argentine republic bids fair to be Anglicised before many years, which will be all the guarantee that England wants. The best thing that could happen the South American states would be British supremacy. The lazy, worthless gang that comprise the population of those countries should be wiped out as governing factors. A people who will not work themselves nor let anybody else, a people, who, when not engaged in sybaritism are cutting each other's throats, are unworthy of the support of the "Monroe doctrine."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

During the first nine months of the year 244,456 emigrants left England, as compared with 282,876 during the corresponding months of last year. There have been only 49,348 Irish emigrants, as against 56,644 during the same period in 1889.

The immense importance of excessive care in the insulation of an ocean cable is shown by HERBERT LAWS WEBB in the October Scribner. He describes how, after the cable has been taken on board the vessel to which is to be intrusted the task of laying it, it is kept cool and free from strain in the ship's tank, where it is submerged in water. When the time comes for paying out and the cable is straightened and has to bear a strain of several tons as it leaves the ship's stern, then any slight imperfection will be revealed, and although it may consist merely of a minute bubble of air which has burst and made a puncture in the gutta percha into which a fine hair could not be introduced, although it may be only a crack so imperceptible that it would not admit of the insertion of the corner of a cigarette paper, yet the current would escape, and, like the insignificant stream which trickles over a dam, would gradually widen the breach, until the cable was electrically "broken down" and entirely useless for communication.

General LAURIE may entertain queer notions of mileage, but he is consistent in the matter of fiscal policy, which is not a characteristic of the party of which he is a member. In a recent speech the General, as a consistent advocate of protection, praised the McKinley bill, for which he was dubbed by the London Star, says the Montreal Herald, "Balaam's Ass." The London Star, we are afraid, in thus designating the General, raises the question of its own identity. If protection is good for Canada it is good for the States. No National Policyist can consistently uphold Fosterism and condemn McKinleyism. Gen. LAURIE in praising McKinleyism is true to his convictions, and however much he may err in them he rises head and shoulders above the gang who preach one thing and practice another.

In respect to the theory that the disaster at Lake Labish was caused by the removal of a rail, it is so "thin" that we wonder that the company should adopt it. It does sometimes happen that criminals go the longest way round to accomplish crime, but it seems incredible that men so bent on a murderous purpose should go to the pains of removing a rail, when with one-tenth the trouble they can accomplish the same results. Horse shoes are said to be effectual instruments in derailing moving trains, and there is not a train wrecker in the country who is not familiar with this procedure. The man who should go to work and steal a wrench and crowbar and spend half an hour removing a rail, when a few horse shoes placed on the track, or a few sticks of wood for that matter, would accomplish the same results, is just simply insane. It might have happened, but the chances are it didn't. The railway company had better take refuge in the plea that there is no accounting for the accident, and especially since it seems to be agreed that the bridge was substantial enough to stand the strain that was imposed upon it.

The Mayor of St. Louis becoming interested in the movement to obviate the smoke nuisance addressed a communication to the physicians of the city asking for their views on the subject, and the responses presented some astonishing facts. One surgeon, who the Mayor believed had cut up over 200 bodies in a single year, said he had not failed in a single instance to discover in the lungs small particles of soot clinging to the tissues. In one of the medical colleges it was noted that a city resident's lungs were dark colored from the smoke inhaled, while a countryman's lungs were generally of a pink color. The physicians asserted that smoke tends to aggravate coughs, colds, consumption, catarrh and all diseases of the respiratory organs. The disclosure of these facts provoked another nuisance, fifty inventors of smoke-consumers dogging the Mayor's footsteps and making his life a burden. He, however, disregarded their importunities, believing he himself had a feasible plan for disposing of the smoke. That was for every one having a steam-boiler in use to run a jet down into the furnace over the fire. The steam applied in small quantities would, he declared, do away with 80 per cent. of the smoke. The consumption of the smoke also meant a saving of fuel.

The San Francisco Examiner, discussing the future of the type writer, concludes that a standard key-board for all machines will soon become a prime necessity. No two of the standard type writing machines now in use have key-boards exactly alike, and the consequence is that, however expert the operator may be in the manipulation of a certain make, he must, if required to use another machine, learn all over again. The Examiner thinks that a consultation should be held among the most expert and intelligent type writers of the land, and they should come to some agreement in regard to this important question. Everybody who has made any study of the orthography of words in common use, is aware that there are certain combinations of letters which repeatedly occur, and with a very little planning these letters can be arranged in such a manner that they can be rapidly struck by the fingers of either hand, acting in the most natural manner. But one of the machines on the market shows any science in the adjustment of its keyboard, and that can be greatly improved. The characteristic of almost all of the other machines is the complete absence of any practical common sense in regard to this very practical matter. Besides this feature of the case, there is millions in it for the man who can so improve the type writer that "articles," conjunctions and propositions not exceeding three letters may be struck at a blow. It is not that any time could be saved by such a contrivance, but that there would be less effort that would make this improvement valuable. But whether this change can be affected or not to any positive advantage, it is clearly common sense that the keyboards of all type writers should be exactly alike.

BEAUTIFUL HOMES.

Two Splendid Residences Nearly Ready for Occupancy—Elegant Buildings.

The fame of Victoria homes is almost world wide. The quiet and unostentatious, although rich and substantial style of her citizens' residences having been a matter of favorable comment among tourists. During the past summer many new homes have been added to the total of those which have adorned the suburbs, and not the least worthy of notice among them are the two new houses of ex-Alderman D. R. Harris, and Mr. Robt. Ward.

Mr. Harris' house has been under construction for several months, and is now rapidly approaching completion. The architect, Mr. T. C. Sorby, has designed a homelike, and at the same time ornate building. The contractor, Mr. J. W. Carter, has carried out his work faithfully, and the result is a home that anyone could be proud of. The site of the building was well chosen, the corner of Burdette avenue and Vancouver street being a commanding locality, from which the view is grand, and where the surroundings are in keeping with the style of the house erected. A look through the interior proves that the exterior gives no false impression. Solid comfort seems to have been sought for in the design, and the artisans have brought out from the plans a modern and convenient building. All the conveniences of the age have been adopted. Hot-water heating is applied to the lower story, the radiators being beautifully colored and decorated. Electric bells and annunciators, as well as speaking-tubes, have been put in, and in all its details the house is a complete one. The total cost will be about $25,000.

The finish, while not gaudy, is rich. Colored Minton tiles are used in the mantels and in the bath room. The bright colors have a good effect. The ceiling of the main hall is finished in panel work of an intricate design and soft coloring which is very pleasing to the eye; and the same style of tasteful work has been observed in the several rooms. A large conservatory, hot-water heated, opens off the drawing room, and as it faces the south, will be a very pleasant winter room. The grounds are extensive, and are to be laid out to give the best effect, and when all is completed the new residence will be a source of pride to the owner and a credit to the city.

MR. WARD'S NEW RESIDENCE.

Another ornate addition to Victoria's residential architecture is the new home now nearly completed from the designs and plans made by Mr. T. C. Sorby and carried out by Mr. G. Mesher, sr.

It is situated on the south side of Belcher street, commanding a magnificent prospect from all sides, where indeed Victoria's incomparable scenic wealth is spread out to full view. The trees near the house have been partly cleared away so as to render the approaches more spacious. Terraces have been made to add to the effect. The entrance to the house is from a very broad flight of steps and through a highly ornamental Ionic portico carved in fruit columns. The doors are of solid oak, carved, and decorated with real bronze ornaments. The entrance hall is 16 feet wide and 36 feet long, the height at the entrance being 27 feet; the ceilings and walls are panelled and ornamented in original designs.

The dining room, which opens off the hall is 30x18 feet and also panelled. On one side is a spacious Ingle nook, a very handsome feature of the room; there is also an elegant ornamental fireplace with mantelpiece. On the other side of the hall is the drawing room with a handsome window opening out on the verandah. The lower part of the window swings up and thus avoids the discomfort and trouble of opening into the room. Not the least handsome or ornamental portion of this room is the fire-place. The decorations of this room will be electric blue and a delicate white. In a private wing are the breakfast room and library, both well-lighted, spacious apartments, and admirably adapted to the purposes required of them. They are supplied with light from bay windows looking north and east. These rooms are each about 16 x 18 feet, and are very handsomely fitted up.

The kitchen appointments are on this floor, and are both perfect and complete in every respect of modern requirements. The day nursery is also on this floor, and is supplied with all toilet requisites. It is intended for future use as a billiard room. Its size is 24 x 19. There is a separate entrance for the children from the garden.

Returning to the hall, the visitor is confronted by a broad, commanding staircase, with a spacious landing half way up, giving access to a balcony over the portico, from which a superb view is obtainable. The window of this landing is of unusual size, being 8 feet wide and 12 feet high. Externally it is highly decorated with carving. The primary intention was to have had stained glass, but Mr. Ward was prevailed upon by Mr. Sorby to forego interior decoration for outer splendor in this case and not hide nature's charms even behind richly painted glass.

The upper hall is very spacious. From this the principal rooms are approached. There is a private suite of apartments containing a bedroom 20x23 feet, with a large bay window from which a grand view is had. There are also a dressing room, a store cupboard and bathroom. The bath has been specially imported from England. Throughout this suite the fittings and decorations are of the best and handsomest description; The small oriel window in the bath room is especially interesting feature. The upper panes of glass are painted with aquatic birds and flowers.

Adjoining this is the nursery suite leading by a back stair case from the day nursery below. Here again are bath rooms and all toilet requisites in complete order, the water supply and ventilation having received particular attention. There are several other bedrooms of various size with spacious linen closets, fitted with hot and cold water, and having closets for wardrobe purposes. All the rooms are supplied with ornamental fire places, mantel pieces and tiled hearths, each room being finished in a different design.

A back stair case leads up to the Belvedere, a room of about 16 feet square, from the balcony of which a crowning view of all is obtained.

Viewed from the lawn, the building is a monument of architectural skill and taste of design. The western elevation is exceedingly ornate. The verandahs are treated somewhat with Moorish detail, but the remainder of the structure is more or less strictly Ionic. The cost is estimated in the neighborhood of $25,000.

LAST OPPORTUNITY.

Mr. Seward, the Eminent N. Y. Optician, Preparing to Leave for Home.

Having faithfully promised to be in New York by Christmas, and being obliged to stop for a few days at Portland, Denver, St. Louis, Cincinatti and Washington, Mr. Seward will leave Victoria

Thursday, December 4th.

The prospects are that Mr. Seward will not have time to finish all the work now in sight, before leaving, but if all those intending to call will do so without further delay, he will make the test and finish what he can and send the balance from New York.

Mr. Seward's success has been complete. Hundreds of Victorians have been benefited by his superior skill in adapting glasses, and no failures have been reported.

Mr. Seward's services are in great demand wherever he goes, and it will probably be several years before he will reach this coast again.

Dr. McNaughton Jones, Dr. Milne Dr. Garrow, Postmaster N. Shakespeare, Collector A. R. Milne and hundreds of others now wearing Mr. Seward's glasses speak of the work in the highest terms.

A record of the test and degree of the glasses given in each case is kept on the books for future reference, so that in case of accident, any person can have their glasses duplicated by addressing F. D. Seward, Box 3,567 New York.

Office corner Yates and Douglas sts. 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; evenings 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., until Thursday December 4th.

A HANDSOME BLOCK.

A New Block to be Erected by Mr. R. T. Williams.

Another building which Victoria may well feel proud of is shortly to be erected on Broad street by R. T. Williams, and it will be an ornament to the street. Tenders are being called for its erection by Messrs. Hooper & Goddard, architects, who are drawing the plans arranging for a first class structure to be supplied with all the most modern appliances for the convenience of the occupants and their patrons. The building is to be four stories high with basement, with a depth of 66 feet and 36 feet frontage. Stone and brick will be used in the construction, and pressed brick and cut stone will make a pretty front. The upper flat will be arranged for offices, meeting halls, etc., the lower floor will be used for stores. The plans call for the interior to be in harmony with the exterior, and everything calls for a first class block. Steam or hot air will keep the occupants warm in the winter and elevators will carry people to the offices on the upper flats. The new block will be built on Broad street, opposite View, which, being a good location, will soon find tenants for the enterprising builder.

Advice to Correspondents.

(From a long-suffering Compositor.)

Never write with pen or ink it is altogether too plain, and doesn't hold the mind of the editor and the printers close to their work.

If you are compelled to use ink, never use that vulgarity known as the blotting pad. If you drop a blot of ink on the paper, lick it off; the intelligent compositor loves nothing so dearly as to read through the smear this will make across twenty or thirty words; we have seen him hang over such a piece of copy half an hour swearing like a pirate all the time—he felt so good.

Use capital letters for, or, in printers' language, "keep up" every second word; the "reader" finds as much fun in knocking them down again as in playing a game of skittles—and the compositor likes it.

Don't punctuate; we prefer to punctuate all manuscript sent to us.

Don't try to write too plainley; it is a sign of plebian origin and school board breeding.

"Poor writing is an indication of genius," it is about the only indication of genius that a great many men we know possess.

Scrawl your articles with your eyes shut, and make every word as illegible as you can; it does just as well to light the stove fire as though it were covered with copper plate sentences.

Avoid all painstaking with proper names; our compositors and proofreaders know the full name of every man, woman, and child in the known and unknown world, and the merest hint of the name is sufficient; for instance, if you write a character something like a drunken letter "S," and then draw a wavy line—he knows at once that you mean Samuel Morrison, even though you may think you mean Lemuel Messenger.

The worse you write the better the compositor likes it, for he likes to show his knowledge, and we keep men who have been to Egypt and had a thorough training with Egyptian hieroglyphics.

"Always write on both sides of the paper," and when you have filled up both sides of every page trail a line up and down every margin, and back to the top of the first page, closing the article by writing the signature just above the date.

Lay your paper on the ground when you write. The rougher the paper the better. Coarse brown wrapping paper is the best for writing your articles on. If you can tear down an old theatrical bill and write on the pasty side of it with a pen-stick, it will do still better.

How we do love to get hold of articles written in this style. And how we should like to get hold of the man that sends them. Just for ten minutes. Alone. In the woods, with a revolver and bowie knife in our pocket. Revenge is sweet. From a PRINTER.

For Sleepless People.

Five rules to insure sleep: Eat nothing hearty after five o'clock; calm your mind before retiring; go to bed at a regular hour; when you wake rise at once; never sleep during the day.

Why Sneezing Is Healthful.

The London Lancet says that the people who sneeze often are the healthiest. A sneeze sets the blood circulating and throws off a cold which is trying to settle.

Apples Will Keep Cake Moist.

Two apples kept in a cake-box will keep moderately rich cake moist a great length of time, if the apples are renewed when withered.

A PIONEER BISHOP.

An Illinois Church Dignitary Once Announced as the Author of the Bible.

My first recollections of a general convention, says a writer in the New York Post, are connected with the convention held at St John's Church in this city, when Bishop Philander E. Chase, of Illinois, presided over the House of Bishops. Bishop Hopkins, of Vermont, was the preacher, and Rev. William E. Wyatt, D. D., of Baltimore, was president of the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies. Bishop Chase was a most remarkable man. He had been built for a pioneer. Rugged, indomitable and full of zeal, he had first been Bishop of Ohio, where he had built up a college and theological seminary, and then he had taken up his staff again and gone out into Illinois to do the trying work of a church colonist there. He was striking in appearance—tall, eagle-eyed and spare of flesh—and as I first saw him sitting in the chancel of St. John's crowned with his black velvet skull cap, I thought he might be another Torquemada. His whole heart was in his work, and in those days the welfare of Jubilee College, his latest establishment in Illinois, was most in his thoughts. I remember to have heard that when seated at the table of an eminent statesman of Knickerbocker ancestry in this city Bishop Chase was observed to eye with painful interest the massive silver plate that glittered before his eyes and then fall back in his chair in a state of collapse. His host bent forward and inquired eagerly what was the matter. "I was thinking of poor Jubilee," was the reply. The response of his entertainer was a promise to make an immediate contribution to the cause in Illinois, and the good Bishop at once recovered his equipoise and ate a hearty dinner. It was said that he ended every letter to a layman with a "P. S. Remember poor Jubilee," but this may have been a bit of gossip.

In his attire Bishop Chase looked the pioneer preacher, and in his ways he acted it. Arrived at a town in Illinois where the service of the church had never been heard, he hired a hall and engaged the town-crier to go around with a bell and announce that he would preach that night. "Who shall I say is going to preach?" asked the guileless bell-ringer. "Say that a minister of the church which first translated the Bible into English will preach." The awe-struck crier proceeded to parade the town, and gathered the biggest audience ever known in the town by proclaiming that "the man that wrote the Bible is going to preach to-night!" Officially and in private this prelate was simplicity itself. Once when in England he went to call on Lord Kenyon, from whom he had received large subscriptions for his college in Ohio (which has since graduated a President of the United States, Mr. R. B. Hayes, and several Cabinet Ministers and Governors), and for whom he had named it. With a traveling-cap on his head, a muffler about his throat, and carpet-bag in hand, the Bishop ascended the stoop and rang the bell. A supercilious flunkey appeared, gazed upon him with scorn, told him he did not know whether he could see the nobleman or not, and left him outside the door while he carried in the back of an old envelope as a card. In a minute more the door was flung wide open and the flunkey bowed nearly to the floor as he exclaimed: "Walk in, me Lud, walk into the droring-room. His Ludship will be down in a moment to receive your Ludship. Walk in, me Lud!" The pioneer prelate of the West, undismayed in the presence of white and red frontiersman, was taken aback at the plentiful salutation and walked in, still holding tightly to his carpet-bag and muttering to himself: "The Lord have mercy on such a Lordship as mine." But he used to tell the story with great glee afterwards.

NELSON NOTES.

Newsy Items From the Miner—A Busy Town in the Mountains.

A resident of Nelson recently lifted 1310 pounds, dead weight. He did not use harness, and the weight was three saw-mill castings.

Several Nelson lots changed hands this week, at prices slightly in advance of those paid at the auction sale. As no lots were bought by outsiders, persons wishing to purchase now can be accommodated by resident owners. A number of Ralfor lots, also, were sold during the week, one real estate agent filling out about 25 agreements.

One mercantile house in Nelson reports sales of over $20,000 in the last two and a half months. Pretty good for a one-horse merchant in a one-horse town.

The second bargeload of lumber from Buchanan's Kootenay Lake sawmill was landed at Ainsworth this week. Enough lumber is now on the ground there to supply this year's demand.

Thomas Shearer and partners have finished the work of cutting the trail between Balfour and Ainsworth. Mr. Shearer reports the trail about 11 miles long, with an easy grade, except down to and out of Coffee creek.

The Surprise and barge left Nelson on Friday afternoon for Ainsworth with 19 of Joe Wilson's pack animals. They will be used in packing ore from the Skyline to the end of the wagon road, now at the United mine, distant about 2½ miles from the Skyline.

It is a real pleasure to edit a 1-horse newspaper, do job work with half a dozen founts of type, help a teamster with a baulky span of mules haul a winter's supply of wood, rustle money to build a wharf, and then to be politely told by a 1-horse hotelkeeper that you are trying to "run the town."

The boys down at Trail Creek have a good deal of fun in a quiet way. One of their number recently cached himself for ten days in a hollow cedar log to escape service of a warrant that was never sworn out against him. When told that he was "jobbed," he took it good naturedly and spent the proceeds of the first shipment of ore from the Josie mineral claim (in which he has a working interest) in setting up drinks at the Gladstone house for the men who "jobbed" him.

J. E. Dolan, inspector of customs at Kootenay, Idaho, conveyed a cargo of goods through to Nelson this week. His indignation can be imagined when informed by collector Rykert at the boundary line customs house, that the goods conveyed were on the free list and allowed to be entered at any port in the broad Dominion, and further that he could not collect a cent for convoy expenses from the parties to whom the goods were consigned.

More freight for Kootenay Lake points is arriving at Kootenay station, on the Northern Pacific, than can be handled by the freighters. The result will be, if the goods are not forwarded, that many of the lake merchants will run out of staple goods long before navigation opens in the spring.

A young man known as "Kid" Lynch, was arrested at a cabin a mile below Ainsworth this week on a charge of having robbed an old man of a watch and a ring. The jewelry was found in his possession. He was arraigned before stipendiary magistrate Tunstall, who happened to be at Ainsworth, found guilty, and given a six months jail sentence at Kamloops. Lynch is now at Nelson, on his way to serve the sentence. Quick work.

Not long since an expert would-be burglar opened the safe of a Chicago hotel simply by sandpapering the ends of his fingers so that they were so sensitive that he could feel by the jar when the knob of the safe was turned to the right number of the combination. That expert was a long way ahead of the expert manager of a Nelson store, who received a new Taylor safe from Toronto this week. He could not open the safe after reading the printed directions and learning by heart the numbers of the combination.

A most disagreeable shock was given the people of Ainsworth last Sunday on learning that some prowling would-be assassin had fired a shot at Dr. Hendryx the evening before at the Blue Bell mine. It appears that Dr. Hendryx, accompanied by Mrs. Hendryx, went out of the house after dark. Mrs. Hendryx carrying a lantern and walking ahead, the doctor slightly behind. When a short distance from the house, a shot was fired, evidently at the doctor, by some one concealed in the shrubbery near an outhouse in the vicinity of the dwelling, the shot passing close to Mrs. Hendryx and striking the ground near the doctor. An alarm was at once given to the men in the mine boarding house close by, but no trace could be found of the miscreants. A boat was sent over to Ainsworth, but unfortunately the people there were not warned; and, although the men in the boat saw a boat land near the swash lodges, the occupants of it escaped to the timber before they could be recognized. So far there is no clue as to the identity of the would-be murderers. There appears to have been two men, as two tracks were discovered on the road or trail the following morning, leading away from the spot from whence the shots were fired.

About half a mile southwest of the Poorman mine and mill, and distant less than seven miles from Nelson, are three claims that promise well. The one on which considerable work has been done is called the Wild Cat, the first extension north being named the Catamount and that to the south the Forest. A tunnel is on the Wild Cat about 40 feet, 20 odd feet of the distance being on the ledge. The width of the ledge is not known, as the hanging wall only has been struck. Lying next the hanging-wall is a streak of decomposed vein matter rich in free gold. The gangue is white quartz, carrying iron and copper pyrites and a little galena, giving assays all the way from $10 in $8 in silver up to ten times these figures. A half interest in the Wild Cat has been held under a developing bond for some time, and the bond will be taken up without doubt. At present men are at work erecting cabins for winter quarters. The Wild Cat was located in May last, and is less than three miles from the railroad crossing of the Kootenay.

Work is being pushed steadily on the Columbia & Kootenay railway. Keefer & Co. having their entire force on the south side of the river, with headquarters two and a half miles below Nelson. R. Fitzgerald, who has a sub-contract at the crossing, is also well along with his work. Lack of timber caused a slight delay on the crib-work of the Kootenay bridge, but a large raft was towed down on Friday by the Surprise. H. F. Keefer is still absent at the coast, and it is not known whether or not he has been ordered to finish the grading to Nelson. D. B. Campbell, the trestle and culvert contractor, has let a contract for the timber needed for the work on the south side of the river up to the 2½ mile point.

YANKEE ENTERPRISE.

Stanley Speaks of Its Great Opportunities in Africa.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18—H. M. Stanley sat in the parlor of the Stratford and talked to an interviewer to-day.

"So you want to know what chance there is for American enterprise in Africa? Well, at present it could only be carried forward on a small scale by private enterprise. Of course there are immeasurable possibilities for development in Africa, but it needs colossal sums. Yet a great deal of trade may be picked up by vessels taking to the coast cargoes of Yankee notions. Before the war Yankee skippers used to visit African shores in Yankee schooners, and they made fortunes. They could do so now better than ever before, but for some unaccountable reason they do not."

"Suppose Yankee schooners go over there laden with canned goods, chairs tables, American notions, new hams, pork, wheat, flour, oatmeal, all kinds of fabrics from velvet to the commonest cotton"

"Well, you get a cargo of these things to the Congo and they will sell like lightning for 100 per cent profit. In exchange you can get either money or palm oil and on bringing the latter back to civilized countries you can realize immense profits. I am convinced that fortunes can be made in this way to-day, just as well as before the war, by American vessels."

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

BUSH DECLARED A WINNER.

Some of McLean's Backers Loose Their Temper and Talk Fight.

As predicted in the TIMES last night a foul was claimed in the Bush-McLean shell race, and the matter was submitted to the starter and referees, who took evidence last evening and heard all that could be gathered. It appears McLean ran his boat into a piece of driftwood, and in backing away, shipped some water into his shell. He found it impossible to pull with the extra weight and abandoned the race. A claim was made of a foul, as it was said Bush had struck one of McLean's sculls and overturned the shell. This was denied by Bush and others, and the referee gave the race to Bush, after hearing evidence from judges on the bridges and outside parties.

After the decision one or two of McLean's backers made a good deal of rough talk, and threatened fight. The matter ended in a threat, on their part, however, as discretion was evidently considered the better part of valor. It is a pity that a defeat cannot be taken with good grace by some people who pose as sports. Talking fight is in bad taste, and a thing only resorted to by poor losers. Keeping cool is a great virtue, especially to those who engineer a boat race.

Art Notice.

Mr. Biggar will enlarge your portrait in any of the kinds of work of art you would desire. Oil, porcelain or crayon, water color, or pastelle, or Indian ink, all complete, with handsome frame, $15. Orders taken at the Boston Candy factory. oct11-1m.

Government Land Sale.

There will be a sale of government reserve land at New Westminster on October 20th and 21st, in Herring's opera house. The land is located near the city of Westminster and is said to to be of considerable value. Bidding on the same at the sale is expected to be brisk. Mr. T. J. Trapp will wield the auctioneer's gavel.

Several Reasons Why.

Why is Northfield coal the best?
1. It is the hardest.
2. Gives a hotter fire and consumes the least fuel.
3. It does not clinker.
4. Free from stone and slate.
5. It makes a cheerful fire burning free and clear.

Kept at the Rock Bay coal yard whose prices will be found in another column. no7-tf

In the Silent Tomb.

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of Mary, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. McGregor, took place. The young lady, who was in her seventeenth year at the time of her death, had many friends, and the attendance at the funeral was large. The floral offerings were also many, the casket containing all that was mortal of the deceased being covered with the tributes brought by loving hands. Rev. Donald Fraser preached the funeral service, and spoke pathetically upon the young life cut down so early, but referred to the hope of a Christian, the happy meeting in a hereafter. The pall bearers were Messrs. Albert Wills, J.S. Fullerton, R. H. Swinerton, E. Langley, A. McCreedy and Fred. Adams. The funeral cortege left the deceased's late residence, North Park street, for the cemetery at half-past two, and was composed of many carriages containing mourners, who thus paid a last tribute to the dead.

Without Mail Service.

A gentleman who recently arrived from the Interior says that the people of Ainsworth, Hotsprings, are greatly incensed at the Post Office Department for not keeping its promise, made through the Inspector, about the establishment at an office near them. The nearest post office is thirty miles distant, and no mail service is supplied to carry their mail to it. There was hundreds of people there this summer, and they had to rely on the kindness of people to have their mail posted. Mr. Wheeler, who owns a steamer on the lake, took a lot of letters down to Washington Territory, where they were posted. Of course this required American stamps, and the informant says that hundreds of dollars was spent in American stamps, when it would have reverted to the Dominion Government if they had an office there. When the inspector was there last summer he promised to have mail service established immediately, but so far nothing has been done.

The Prophetic Lectures.

Last evening in the old Presbyterian church, Courtney street, Mr. Grant gave his second lecture on the Bible prophecies, illustrated by his mammoth historic chart. An intelligent audience listened with undivided attention to the interesting unfolding of the subject. It was very manifest that Mr. Grant has given special attention to the subject of Bible prophecy and its fulfilment. He claimed that none but an omnipotent and omniscient Being could give infallible prophecy, for if he was not omnipotent, some stronger one might prevent the fulfilment of His prophecy, and if not omniscient, He would most surely make some mistakes when he undertook to reveal what is to come hereafter. Mr. Grant says he believes "the prophecies of the sacred scriptures are just as true as that twice two are four." He took for his text John 10:35 —"The Scripture cannot be broken." He examined the prophecies in Daniel which relate to the four great Gentile kingdoms—the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian and Roman, stopping at the Roman, leaving that for his next lecture. The correspondence between the prophecies and the history, as laid out upon the chart, is truly wonderful. He said the one who prepared the original chart, from which this was painted, had no idea it would ever be used to show the inspiration of the Bible. The original was designed solely to teach history. It may well be said, "these lectures should be heard by everybody." It is a rare chance for the citizens of Victoria. The lecture tomorrow evening, on the Roman empire, no doubt, will be one of particular interest.

Will Play at the Hill

Another very fair house greeted Gorton's Minstrels last evening, and the company left for the Mainland this morning, whence they will go to Nanaimo, returning here on Sunday. If the weather permits, the band will discourse on the Hill on Sunday afternoon.

The Westminster Ferry.

The city council of Westminster have appointed two engineers and a master for the new steam ferry boat. Chief Engineer H. C. Teschner, salary $100 per month; second engineer William Rogers, salary $75 per month; master, W. P. Grant, salary $100 per month. The boat will soon be ready for work.

Fast Time.

The Union Pacific vestibuled train leaving Portland at 7.00 a.m., has Pullman sleeping and dining cars. Free Pullman tourist cars, and free reclining chair cars to Omaha, Kansas City and Chicago, without change. Steamers leave Victoria daily (except Sunday.) For tickets to any point east north and south, call on or address Morris J. Bissell, 100 Government St., Victoria, B.C.

Better than a Directory.

Now that all the real estate men have shown themselves sufficiently enterprising as to provide themselves with a first-class map of Victoria, time can be spared to serve private people. Hibben & Co.'s map of the city and surrounding district should be in every business house, and also in every private dwelling. For the latter purpose the map has been gotten out on a smaller scale, price 50 cents. It is better than a directory, and much handier in finding one's way round town.

To Watch Their Interests.

Quite a bevy of representative Vancouverites arrived over from the Mainland last night. Among them were Mayor Oppenheimer, A. St. G. Hammersley, Dr. Robertson, Dr. Beckingsdale, Dr. Baddington, J. J. Blake, J. F. McGuigan, J. McLaren, T. Granville, A. Larmen, J. M. Bowell and Joseph Huntley. They are here to watch the case of the C. P. N. Co. vs. Vancouver city, the particulars of which appeared in the TIMES some days since and which will be brought before the Chief Justice and a special jury to-morrow.

A Rare Entertainment.

The Swedish Quartette, assisted by Miss Lura Barden, will appear in the Victoria on Friday evening, under the patronage of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, and for the benefit of the United Temperance Societies. The Quartette have received recommendation from almost every city in the States, and their abilities are well known, as is also Miss Lura Barden, who is winning for herself a name as a dramatic and humorous reciter. The Quartette appear in their native costumes at every entertainment, which adds a pleasing effect. A large number of seats have already been taken, and a crowded house is assured.

Port Angeles to Victoria.

The Port Angeles Times says: Capt. H. A. Harding, of the steam schooner Francis Cutting, is trying to complete arrangements relative to running his boat between Port Angeles and Victoria. He is quite willing and ready to establish a daily boat between the two points, provided he can only make a little above expenses for a while. His vessel is admirably adapted for the route and is a strong and good sailing vessel. She belongs to the Cutting line of boats owned in San Francisco, and for the past season has been employed by the canneries at Cook's Cove. She is 80 feet long and 90 tons burden. It is not unlikely that Capt. Harding will give the daily run a trial and in case it should not pay he will then make a trip every other day and run from Townsend to Clallam Bay on alternate days.

St. Ann's Bazaar.

It is safe to say that there are hundreds of people who look pleasantly back at the bazaar given last summer by the ladies of the Roman Catholic congregation. The same ladies, acting with the Sisters, will conduct, in the same place, Philharmonic Hall, a similar bazaar to-morrow and Friday, their efforts this time to be in aid of the orphans of St. Ann's. This is an annual event, but rather more than usual importance attaches to it this year on account of the rapid growth of the orphanage, its increasing needs consequent upon that growth, and the resolution of the Sisters to enlarge the institution at Cowichan. Therefore additional efforts will be put forth to meet the requirements of the case, and the result to be expected will be a bazaar of unusual excellence. Apart from the sale of work the evenings will be taken up with vocal and instrumental music, the contributions of several talented and generous amateurs.

The First of a Series.

Not very long ago the Baptist church was hardly known in Victoria, the congregation being very small and strong efforts were needed to keep up. But nevertheless untiring pastors have not only kept the church up, but they have added materially to its strength by gathering together the strangers of their denomination. The Calvary Baptist church was built, then enlarged, and a few months ago a branch church was built at Spring Ridge, but very little was heard of it until Rev. Thompson came here, when the congregation worked together to build a name for their little church. To do this socials and entertainments are necessary, so that members of the church, and the young folks are brought together oftener. Rev. Mr. Thompson has adopted this plan, and last evening the first of a winter's series of socials was held in the little edifice on upper Chatham street. A very enjoyable evening was spent by those present, the ladies of the church exerting themselves to make all feel at home. A varied musical programme was disposed of during which chocolate and cake were passed around. The best wishes of all are that the Emanuel church may continue to prosper under the new pastorate.

The Market Healthier.

Real estate men rub their hands cheerfully before their office stoves just now, and when asked whence the cause of this unwonted effusion they say that property, city, suburban and outside, is "looking up." This is intended to convey the meaning that prices are a little healthier, there is a better demand, and the market wears a generally healthy aspect. In city and suburban property the demand is chiefly for investments, while outside speculative operations are sufficiently brisk to avoid anything approaching a boom.

St. Barnabas Church.

Another brick was added to the structure of St. Barnabas church last evening by the concert and entertainment held in Christ Church cathedral. A varied programme was rendered and judging from the manifest appreciation of the audience, the bill of fare was highly appreciated. The pretty little structure in which this promising and energetic congregation are to worship, is fast approaching completion. Among the ladies and gentlemen who kindly lent their services were: Mrs. Goepel, Miss Heathfield, Miss Beeton, Messrs. Herbert Kent, P. Woolaston, C. Woolaston and Rev. A. Beanlands.

A LEGITIMATE SPORT

But Latterly it Has Received Some Bad Set Backs.

Yesterday, before the Bush-McLean shell race, Chief Engineer Deasy told McLean that should Bush wish to pull another race this season he would have to leave the service of the fire department. The chief said he did not mind Bush having one race, but it was detriment to the city's interests to have one of its officers making arrangements for professional boat racing. In the face of this declaration by the chief, McLean to-day challenged Bush to pull again, offering to put up $500 against Bush's $250. Of course Bush can do as he wishes about accepting, but if he pulls he must leave the fire department, and he would be foolish to do that.

Unfortunately for lovers of good sport this boat pulling has degenerated into a grab match for bets. Instead of a race being rowed and decided on its merits, and settled in a fair and equitable way by the referee's decision, the gambling element has got such a hold that all races are declared crooked, and the loosers on either side raise a howl when their man is not made a winner by the judges. If the antics and accusations of the last few days are continued, the outside public will loose all faith in the legitimacy of boat racing, and the sport will find its level with prize fighting or other kindred "cinch" games.

Hopes of Recovery.

Edward Wrigleswerth, who yestereay fell 40 feet from the new R. C. Cathedral, was resting much easier to-day and Dr. Hanington, who is attending him, has strong hopes for recovery.

The Bridge Accident.

The item relating to Mr. Hill's horse was slightly incorrect as to details. The horse was hurt by falling through a hole in a bridge covered over by a loose plank. The accident occurred in the forenoon and is said by Mr. Hill to be attributable to the neglect of the Government in not having the bridge properly repaired.

Police Circles.

The chilly nights seem to keep drunks at home or else around a bar-room stove, for the police court this morning was empty, with the exception of His Honor, who did not even take his seat on the bench, and other court officials, who stood around wondering why they were there, as not a case was there to be heard. To-morrow, however, promises to be livelier, as one drunk and a man charged with assault have been summoned.

Called Home.

Jno. O'Connor, a native of North Sydney, N.S., died at St. Joseph's Hospital last night, of hemorrhage of the lungs, after a lingering illness. He was aged 29 years, and had been here only a short time, being engaged in the hotel business at the corner of Fort and Douglas streets. The deceased was a school teacher in Nova Scotia, and was much respected. The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's Hospital, and from the R. C. pro-Cathedral at 9:30 on Friday morning.

In the Mazy Dance.

An echo of the past was sounded with all the freshness and vigor of the present in Philharmonic Hall last evening. The decorative preparations for the occasion of the Comus club dance were not on an extravagantly extensive scale, but the occupants of the hall for the time being made everything as brilliant and lively as could be desired. Old faces and figures put in an appearance, and went into the rejoicing quite as naturally and freshly as though the last dance was held but yesterday. The dance last evening was a thoroughly enjoyable event, for the simple reason that every one went with the determination to dance. The floor, which was in very good condition, was thoroughly tested by about fifty couples, who carried through a capital dance programme, and called for several extras as well. There were some very tasteful costumes, among them two or three slight innovations, which will of course undergo the process of being copied before long. An interval was made in the programme for refreshments, which were found very acceptable. This very necessary formality disposed of, the guests again abandoned themselves to to the exhilirating music provided by Prof. Pferdner.

Galiano Island.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Jhaw, of Galiano island, took place on Monday, Nov. 17th, from Vesuvius Bay church. The Rev. R. J. Roberts officiated at the service which was largely attended by the friends and neighbors of deceased, by whom he was held in high esteem. He was a native of Kirkconnel, Dumfrieshire, Scotland.

Keene vs. the Corporation.

It was reported on the streets yesterday afternoon that the case of Keene vs. the corporation had been gainedby the plaintiff by default. Upon inquiry it was learned that the report arose over a mistake made by a clerk, and although there were some grounds for the rumor, it is certain that judgment has not been given for either side yet.

Change of Proprietors.

The Ship Inn, on Wharf street, has been purchased by Messrs. James Brown and Hugh Griffiths, well known in Victoria, from Mr. J. Meldram. Mr. Brown is so well known in our city as a first-class bartender that it only need be said of the new firm that they will keep the best brands of liquors and cigars to be found on the Island. Courteous treatment should merit a fair share of patronage. nov18-1w

A New Stable.

Victorians and the traveling public will hear with pleasure that E. Marsden & Bros., who have for a number of years been engaged in the hack business, have launched out more extensively. They have opened a hack and boarding stable in Grimm's building, No. 90 Johnson street, and will always be ready to answer a call for a landau. The building has been nicely fitted up for boarding horses and a splendid staff have been engaged to look after horses and vehicles which will be entrusted to their care. A nicely and comfortably built hack brought out from England by Mr. Beeton has been bought by the new firm and will be put on the stand.

What Changes!

Mr. Metcalf, manager for Galbraith, Grant & company at McDame's creek, Cassiar, who recently arrived down, is one of the few early timers who have stayed with mining. He arrived in Victoria in '59, and was among the first in Omineca, Cariboo and Cassiar. Following up the excitement in those mining districts. This is his second visit to Victoria since he went to Cassiar, the last one being about six years ago. The city, he says, has grown wonderfully in that short time, but what a change to the day he first landed in British Columbia. He will, before returning north, visit the other cities on the coast and also see what changes have come over the eastern cities since he last saw them. The trip across the continent, he expects, will be a little more comfortable than it was when he first arrived on the coast after a long and tedious journey across the plain.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

DIED.

O'CONNOR—In this city, on the 18th instant, of hemorrhage of the lungs, John O'Connor, a native of North Sydney, Cape Breton, aged 29 years.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 9 o'clock a.m., from St. Joseph's Hospital and at 9:30 from St. Andrew's pro-Cathedral, View street. Friends are invited to attend.

$7.00 PANTS

SUCH A JOKE!

Cameron has beaten himself this time! He's sold me goods $2.00 too cheap. I know it, because I priced the same line of goods at another store before going to Cameron's. Ha! ha! ha! ha! he! he! he! ho! ho!

THE JOKE IS

that our much tickled man has paid Cameron's usual price, which is always lower than elsewhere.

The Man that's Beat is the man that has been paying two prices so long that when he gets a fair deal he thinks it's all a mistake.

WHEN IT STRIKES HIM

that, instead of beating us $2.00 now, he's been beaten heretofore on every trade, you'll see that laugh strikes in like colic. But he'll stick to us now he's tried us.
